Arrangement: The Oral History Collection consists of two series: I: Recordings, 1965-2010 and II: Transcripts, 1967-2010. Both series are grouped chronologically according to project initiative and then arranged alphabetically within the grouping by interviewee last name.

Historical Note: The Oregon Shakespeare Festival oral history projects began with a letter from Kay Atwood to the Festival Association in June 1977 proposing a series of interviews. After working as an assistant to scenic designer Richard Hay from 1969 to 1970, Atwood established the OSF Exhibit Center in 1975. As part of her research she recorded interviews with OSF founder Angus Bowmer and original company members Robert Stedman and Dorothy Pruitt. These interviews formed the basis of her inspiration to continue a project documenting the experiences of the people "…whose memories and perspectives about the Festival are rapidly becoming invaluable and irreplaceable." Atwood's proposed oral history project was quickly approved and the plan carried out with assistance from interviewers Nora Yeoman and Joe Kogel between 1977 and 1983. After that, the OSF oral history projects went through a lull until revived by Carl Ritchie, former Director of Public Relations, at the suggestion of Managing Director William Patton in 1992. Ritchie's project lasted from 1992-1994, and in 1998 Executive Director Paul Nicholson turned the microphone back on Ritchie himself and interviewed him for the historical record. Discussions regarding a fresh round of interviews began circa 2000 between OSF Archivist Kit Leary and OSF company member Jacqueline Leighton. The project got underway in 2006 with interviews conducted by Leighton, Hillary Tate, Steve Greenberg and James P. Clason through 2010.

Scope and Content: The Oregon Shakespeare Festival Oral History Collection provides invaluable first-hand accounts of the founding and history of the Festival in the words of individuals who made OSF what it is today. The collection is arranged in two series:

I: Recordings, 1965-2010 (Boxes 1-7 and 84 reel-to-reel tapes)
II: Transcripts, 1967-2010 (Boxes 8-10)

A majority of the materials in the collection were created as part of formally organized oral history projects beginning with Kay Atwood's first series in 1977-1983, followed by Carl Ritchie's project of 1992-1998 and a round of interviews between 2006 and 2010. However, a select group of recordings made outside of these projects and dates have been included in the collection. These items were either classified by Carl Ritchie in 1998 as "Oral Histories and Personal Reflections: Angus Bowmer," or were included in a 1987 "Oregon Shakespearean Festival Association Oral Histories" listing, or were deemed appropriate as isolated interviews with OSF founder Angus Bowmer. Please contact the Archives for interview recordings and transcripts not included in the Oral History Collection.

The oral history recordings are on 5" and 7" reel-to-reel tape, cassette tape, CD and DAT. Additional materials include occasional correspondence, photographs and newspaper clippings about the interviewees, and are housed with interview transcripts. In addition to paper copies, all 2006-2009 transcripts are available as a Microsoft Word file on CD. Most oral history recordings have accompanying transcripts with the exception of the following interviews:
